There's a dedicated node for this: But I tried it and it doesn't seem to be working. I have the following setup: My geometry node looks like this: Also my color ramp is set to: And I tried to adjust tint. A: First thing is to make sure your screen space node isn't bumping that Value field: As I cannot see that screen space node you mention in the question, it seems like there's some error with it. Secondly, your usage of Vertex Color: If you use something like this instead: You'll notice the black color is no longer appearing white. (Sorry, I don't have a current Cycles tree on this computer so can't test out what the exact problem is in yours) Core B will perform a comprehensive evaluation of sedative practice in the NICU using the ABCS approach. The ABCS approach uses a rating instrument, the Sedation-Agitation Scale, to evaluate the levels of sedation, analgesia, calm, and stimulation, and a monitoring tool, the Sedation-Agitation Behavior Scale, to evaluate agitation and disorganization. The primary objective of Core B is to assess sedation practice in NICUs, as evaluated by 1) infants' responses to stimuli, 2) receipt of pain/sedation medications, 3) use of safety equipment, 4) procedural interventions, and 5) infant outcomes. The specific aims of Core B are to 1) evaluate current sedation practice in newborn and young infant units using the ABCS approach, 2) compare pediatric palliative care sedation practices to current practices, and 3) assess impact of implementation of the ABCS approach on sedation practice. This Core will be led by two senior researchers from the University of Pennsylvania Center for Innovation. This Core will work closely with the SPIRIT groups to insure data collection is specific and valid. A novel kinematic sensor for measurement of knee joint motion during walking.
