I just made a really minor edit to an answer that has been marked as helpful. The answer came from the answerer himself, so I think it's unlikely he made the edit himself. I made the edit for the sake of readability and consistency. I feel that the answer is inaccurate and borderline incorrect. The "pros" of the answer are essentially non-existent (no references, no examples, etc.), so there's no way to take the logic and say "that's definitely right/wrong", but the part of the answer which does cite references or give an example isn't presented clearly. If I voted to delete the answer, I'd cite the references and give a general example, and maybe add something about what

The best thing to do is what you want to do (create a function) and then call the function in the event of the button click. Try this code: private void btnBuy_Click(object sender, EventArgs e) { string firstTextBoxValue = textbox1.Text; textbox2.Text = firstTextBoxValue; } This study is an investigation of the risk factors for admission to a state mental hospital for psychiatric patients. The goal is to discover if identifiable elements in the social history of the patient make it possible to predict the future course and treatment of the patient's illness. The study includes two groups: 1) risk factors for admission; and 2) the frequency of subsequent repeat admissions, and the course and treatment of the admissions. This is a cross-sectional study with a retrospective design based on existing records in a national cohort of psychotic patients admitted to a state hospital between 1955 and 1968, and as part of a continuing study of that cohort, information from the records of all the patients admitted from 1970 to the present will be examined. Factors such as age, sex, social history, family history, admission diagnosis, length of stay, and hospital course and treatment will be examined for their association with hospital admission. The social history includes data on the patient's educational history, economic status, occupational history, marital status, living arrangements, family history, and past treatment experience. Data will be collected retrospectively from the patient's medical record, hospital psychiatric records and other available sources, e.g. patient's family members.
