Answer key Module 1 Unit 1 1

You are invited to a reception at the british MÂ .The fate of the long-living T-cell subsets in lymphopenia. Cellular life span alterations have been reported during lymphopenia, particularly in the absence of antigen stimulation. However, there are limited data on the effect of lymphopenia on the lifespan of memory T cells. We examined the size of the functional memory compartment during total lymphopenia induced by whole-body irradiation. We found that the pool size of TCR alphabeta T cells decreased rapidly to approximately 10^5 cells/mouse within a few months, although the number of cycling cells in the alphabeta subset did not decrease, indicating that the alphabeta subset became part of the memory compartment. In contrast, alphabeta T cells of the TCRgammadelta subset did not increase in size during lymphopenia. Moreover, memory T cells were selectively lost from the alphabeta subset, while the numbers of CD4(+)CD25(+) regulatory T cells and natural killer T cells appeared to be unaffected. Our results demonstrate that the size of the alphabeta memory compartment, but not that of the TCRgammadelta memory compartment, is affected by lymphopenia. This is likely to be the consequence of selective elimination of alphabeta memory T cells from the repertoire.
