What's New in the XDESK?

As usual for a stable, professional and fully featured system - XDESK has its own stable and fully featured underlying Operating System. And having that in place means stable, fully featured, well known & fully supported applications and tools - all thanks to the Community that created it. There is no more in-depth description of XDESK than the following. XDESK is more than just a WM and/or DE: it's your desktop environment, at least partly. It's the first OS to provide you with a powerful & stable alternative to the terrible A/V-WM/DE combinations out there in the market and the first to be planned and developed from scratch with you in mind. (...and if you like it? Don't hesitate to pay for it. Support is still possible. You can start a paid version of your own!) XDESK should NEVER be compared with Desktop Widgets - XDESK is better than Widgets for every single reason: Widgets are cheap, Widgets are oversimplified, Widgets are not very stable, Widgets require you to study their code to be able to use them, Widgets are nothing more than applications on top of other applications and they don't provide you any additional features. XDESK is a Virtual Desktop Manager, for as long as you want. And a Desktop Assistant. Well, mostly a Virtual Desktop Manager. XDESK provides you a number of options, that you can choose from: · A Virtual Desktop; · Powerful Automation with Rules, Reminders and an Alarm, the option to create your own actions; · Memory Cleaner; · HotKeys; · HotCorners; · Mouse-Scrolling; · Mouse-Knocking; · TaskList, showing an XHTML application in a new window; · Autostart Applications; · MultiApps; · Applets; · a Displays tab to customize your desktop to your needs; · Task Priority. XDESK is first and foremost a Virtual Desktop Manager. It provides you with a number of options to switch virtual desktops like: · the top panel to show your applications; · the bottom panel to show widgets; · The AppBar to show applets; · Windows to show applications; · Tasklist to show an XHTML app in a new window; · applications to select the applications that you want to use in your desktops; · CPU
